

The magazine Transcontinental Human Trajectories (Trayectorias Humanas Trascontinentales) of the International Latin America, Africa, Caribbean Europe Network “Territories, Vulnerable Populations, Public Policies” from the University of Limoges (France) calls to participate as author for its 7th issue number of may 2020 with the theme:

ENVIRONMENT: CONTEMPORARY CHALLENGES

In August 2019 the media in various parts of the world reported the great burning that hit 20,000 hectares of vegetation in the north and central west of Brazil, reflecting the immediate effects they had on Brazil, Bolivia, Uruguay, Argentina. The non-compliance with environmental policies by the current Brazilian rulers, indicate that the environment is not a priority for the present and the future, despite contrary speeches by the agent and his ministers, it present themselves as contemporary challenges not only for environmentalism, but for scientific knowledge as a whole, day by day devalued by impressions and 'achisms'. Adverse conditions are emerging all over the planet, creating a warning that requires reflection and a change in the socio-environmental paradigm of resource infinity. At the heart of it all, the root question is: is there really a socio-environmental crisis or do we call our existence a crisis in the capitalist development model?

This reflection invites environmentalists, philosophers, engineers, architects, teachers and professionals from all disciplines and areas, to position themselves and contribute to the construction of other models of living and relating to the other, recognized as such in their differences and needs, but at the same time, both participants through political, social, ecological, economic responsibility and sensitivity want the right of all to exist.

This seventh issue of TraHs magazine aims to analyze the different ways of understanding contemporary challenges posed by the environment and respect for the rights of nature in different countries. Thus, the articles must deal with:

- The environment as a subject of contemporary studies
- Knowledge management as a common good, public and open to all present in the proposals of the Buen Vivir ' and its results in the present;
- The emergence of a global environmental policy; the economic, financial, social and symbolic impacts of environmental legislation in countries. Development and use of green energy;
- The theoretical and practical differences between community life and individual well-being in global capitalist society;
- Plural subjects and their voices in the universe of diversity: the forest natives; Environment and interculturality;
- Multinational and environmental identity: for example, the cultural codes of indigenous peoples and nationalities of North and South America; Africans; Europeans;
- Interconnection between economic, environmental, cultural and educational aspects in the construction of contemporary life; environmental education as a whole. Challenges of the decolonial turn and the occupation and use of the landscapes of Latin and African countries;

- Social and territorial equity; sovereignty and socio-environmental integration in Nuestra America, Africa and Europe, in local and global dimensions; analysis of the relationship between the "bien vivir" regime and the "development regime".

Publication Director

Dominique Gay-Sylvestre, University of Limoges, France.

Issue number Directors

Paulo Celso da Silva, Postgraduate Program in Communication and Culture, University of Sorocaba, São Paulo, Brazil;

Mara Rovida, Postgraduate Program in Communication and Culture, University of Sorocaba, São Paulo, Brazil.

For publication policies, please visit <http://www.unilim.fr/trahs/index.php?id=95>

The deadline for submitting contributions (full articles), in Spanish, French, Portuguese or English, according to the journal's rules, is

JANUARY 30, 2020

Submission of proposals to the following email addresses: dominique.gay-sylvestre@wanadoo.fr/revistathtespecial@gmail.com

Authors will be informed of the decision of the Scientific Committee by

February, 20, 2020

COMMENTS

Title: Only the original title and spanish translation are placed.

Order of Abstracts (no more than 250 words and 5 keywords)

- a) For articles written in Portuguese: abstract in Portuguese, French, Spanish and English.
- b) For articles written in French: summary in French, Spanish, Portuguese and English.
- c) For articles written in Spanish: abstract in Spanish, French, Portuguese and English.
- d) For articles written in English: abstract in English, Spanish, French and Portuguese.

We request that all authors review the Abstract, Resumo, Resumen and Résumé